This is a small sample of the wines that exist thanks to the vision and belief of the second and third wave of winemakers in Spain.*

After more than 3000 years of wine production, overcoming tricky terrains, phylloxera, and a civil war, winemaking in Spain had reached a crossroads.

One direction aimed for commercial success, giving way to international grapes and styles. The other celebrated the country's vast pantheon of terroir and grape expressions.

Producers like Palacios, Pérez and Soler are prime examples of producers that exemplify the latter. Indigenous grapes, terroir expression and quality.

In the 70s when NASA was shifting from short moon focused missions to the possibility of long term space travel the topic of food and beverage become more important. Charles Bourland, who worked at NASA Johnson Space Center developing food and food packages for spaceflight, was assigned the task of finding which wine would travel best. After careful consideration and testing the conclusion was that Sherry was best suited for the task.*

The Milwaukee Journal wrote: "the era of prohibition is about to end in space." Following negative response from the general public and packaging issues the wine NASA scrapped the idea. Scientist-Astronaut Edward G. Gibson explained that: "The problem is that you have got some extremists around and we (astronauts) kind of represent a form of purity. As soon as you taint that purity with alcohol, they really get upset,"

In accord with our discussion on Tuesday, August 8, 1972, I have reconsidered the requirement for a fruit beverage (wine) in the Skylab menu and have concluded that there is no basic requirement for such a beverage.

 Vigneti Massa was established in 1897 and can be found on the eastern end of Piemonte here Barbera reigns supreme.*

Walter Massa kicked off the Timorasso revolution in the late 1980s. At that time there was only 0,5ha of Timorasso planted.

When he started selling his Timorasso wines for almost double the amount of liras as the revered Barbera of the region it showed how much he believed in the potential and bright future of the grape.

Today there is about 600 hectares, proving that signore Massas vision was correct!

When their father died in 2000, agronomist Josep and oenologist Joan took over the estate. In the early days, they continued to make heavily structured, oaky and heavy on the alcohol wines, following the trend at the time.

In 2008 they started a total transformation of the vineyards with the aim of making wines in balance with the terroir, following organic and biodynamic methods and focusing on Grenache and Carignan in most of their plots. In 2012 they achieved organic and Demeter certification in all their vineyards.

Josep and Joan d'Anguera craft this old vine Garnacha from vineyards that have been planted in Montsant since the 1820s. This is a refreshing, pure style of Garnacha with highly aromatic red fruits and floral notes on the nose. There's smoky, spicy complexity and a sappy freshness on the finish.
